The weather outside may be frightful, but there are plenty of heated patios, rooftops, and other warm outdoor spaces that NYC has to offer. Here are our favorite heated spots in NYC to check out during the cold winter months.

The Lodge at the Bank of America Winter Village at Bryant Park

40 West 40 Street, Midtown

Winter Village, the go-to destination for all things holiday shopping located right inside of Bryant Park, has a brand new rinkside bar and food hall, The Lodge by Urbanspace. It's a cozy winter destination with a dozen new and classic NYC restaurants to check out and enjoy while staying warm. Food and beverage options include Champagne Bollinger, a luxury champagne bar known for its elegant and complex champagnes produced from their exceptional vineyards. Open all day, it's a perfect spot for grabbing a bite after trying some spins on the ice skating rink, Christmas shopping, or just dedicating an afternoon to some good old fashioned people watching inside the open yet enclosed heated space.
